

Change the Footnote or Endnote Separator

Written by

Tuesday, 25 January 2011 21:50

Doing More with Office Doing More with Word In today's installment of "Tech Tip Tuesday" we link to a Microsoft video on doing more with your footnotes. Enjoy! If your Word document contains footnotes or endnotes, Word will automatically place a small line between the body text and the note text. This line is called the note separator. You can change the footnote or endnote separator to whatever you like or you can remove it by following the steps in this video. Click here to see the video.